

If you are traveling in China and interacting with strangers, you'll find many recurring questions. "Where are you from?" will be the most common but you may find topics you consider taboo to be openly questioned eg "What is your salary?" "How old are you?" "Are you married?" Try not to be offended as these aren't considered sensitive issues in China.

Dialogue

The Literal Translation

nǐ	=	you

nǎ	=	which
guó	=	country

The tone on the word 'nǎ' is important here. Nǎ in the third tone means 'which/where', while 'nà' in fourth tone means 'that/there'.
